

CLEVELAND'S VICTORY.

The Closing Scenes of the Convention's All Night Session.

TAMMANY'S RODERICK DHU

Stands Firm to the Last—Cockran's Frantic Appeal to the Convention to Heed the Warning of New York. Sullen and Silent They Sat Through all the Day for Cleveland—Watterson's Advanced Free Trade Ideas. The Ballot as it was Finally Announced.

Special Dispatch to the Intelligencer.

CHICAGO, June 23.—After an all night session Grover Cleveland is the nominee of the Democratic party for President. He gets it on the first ballot, having more than the necessary two-thirds to give him the nomination.

The ballot was completed at 3:30 this morning, and as I write this dispatch a memorable scene is being enacted. The twenty thousand people were on their feet cheering wildly, hats are tossing in the air; canes, umbrellas and fans waving. Amid it all the New York Tammany delegation and their twenty-five hundred boomers sat silent. There was an ominous quiet on their part.

Immediately before the ballot, Bourke Cockran, the famous Tammany orator, spoke for an hour eloquently pleading with the convention not to nominate Cleveland. He declared Cleveland could not carry New York, and warned the convention that if the New York protest was unheeded the ticket would be imperiled. He charged Cleveland with being the candidate of the "Mugwumps," and would not be supported by the party workers in the Empire State. The speech was very bitter but was respectfully listened to.

At 3:45 the Clevelandites were asked to join in the acclaim, but they sat in their seats ignoring the din about them. They voted "no" when the motion was put to make it unanimous. Mr. Cockran spoke briefly, saying New York would be in line, but Tammany did not join in the applause that followed.

THE CLOSING SCENES

Of Yesterday Morning's session—The Ballot in Detail—An Inspired Band.

CHICAGO, June 23.—A band that has been the accompaniment of many national conventions that it may claim the exemptions and considerations of a veteran started the 20,000 people in the national Democratic convention at 9 o'clock last night by the air of "We won't go home till morning." There was no particular occasion for a suggestive refrain just at that time except that the convention was in the depth of a labyrinth of confusion, but the result shows that the spirit of prophecy which had seized the leader of that band was well justified by the events followed. The heavens were suffused with the yellow light of dawn when the chairman at last declared the convention adjourned, and as the thousands of Democrats fled into the hall shouting victoriously for Grover Cleveland, the more exuberant as they looked in the direction of the rising sun, declared that the hours of sleep had passed, and so indeed they had—not only for the victorious element, but for everybody else, for the streets have re-echoed with ceaseless cheers for Grover Cleveland ever since his nomination was declared unanimous at 4:20 o'clock this morning.

THE RODERICK DHU OF TAMMANY.

Tammany was defiant to the end. The greatest orator of its organization was marshaled for that last moment. As he hurled the greatest political philippic of the age into the very teeth of his opponents, the thousands of Cleveland enthusiasts were conquered into admiration for his courage, and no orator of the national convention of 1892 received more respectful consideration than was accorded to the Hon. Bourke Cockran, of New York. At the conclusion the vast hall reverberated with enthusiastic tribute to his grandeur, but the tide of destiny had been cast. The warning of the eloquent New Yorker was powerless to check the great tidal wave which twenty minutes later hurled from its crest the nomination of a great national convention at the feet of Grover Cleveland. The convention brought with it many surprises. None was greater than that the committee on resolutions should have been repudiated as disloyal to the revenue reform principles of the Democratic party, and its tariff plank swept aside for the substitution of a clause declaring against the principles of protection by maintaining that the federal government has no power to impose tariff duties in excess of the revenue necessities of the government when honestly and economically administered.

WATTERSON'S VICTORY.

In a Democratic convention controlled by friends of Grover Cleveland over two to one, it remained for his principal opponent, Henry Watterson, of Kentucky, to challenge the very friends of the recognized leader of tariff reform for favoring at the crucial moment and endeavoring to compromise and temporize with the burning issue of the age. It was the invincible logic of Watterson, uttered with an emotion almost terrible in its intensity, that caused the convention to pause on the brink; and so ably was the great Kentuckian supported by the fiery Neal of Ohio, who opened the fight as a dissenting member of the committee, that a wave of sentiment which all the pleading of Vilas was powerless to resist, swept over the assembly by a vote of nearly two to one, the committee's recommendation was borne down and another launched on that political stream which flows in but one direction—tariff for revenue only.

For a time it was hard to make the friends of Cleveland in the various delegations believe that Watterson's movement was not a subterfuge of the enemy. That the Kentuckian was glad to avail himself of every means to weaken the prestige of Cleveland, there is no doubt; but when he declared that the tariff declarations of 1884 were no longer sufficient to meet the enlightened views of the Democratic party of today the convention agreed with him and adopted Mr. Neal's substitute regardless of its consequences on the presidential ballot.

Not until the states were passed, and the call of territories nearly through was the nomination of Cleveland on the first ballot assured, so very doubtful indeed was the final result. But when even the most sanguine of his opponents could no longer hope, the air of dejection which spread throughout their ranks told their opponents that victory was theirs and the cheers of five minutes did not suffice to pronounce the tribute of the enthusiastic Democracy for Grover Cleveland.

At 2:35 a. m. Mr. Unshur, of Maryland, moved that Cleveland's nomination be made unanimous. After much confusion and changing of votes by states this was done, there being about half a dozen votes, which were greeted with a hoarse, Cockran (New York) stated that on the motion to make the nomination unanimous New York's vote was cast in full in the affirmative. Chairman Shields, of Iowa, made the same statement for his state, and on motion of Dickinson, of Michigan, the convention, at 2:45 a. m., adjourned until 2 p. m.

GRAY GABLES.

How Cleveland Received the News—Message to D. Moore of the Country.

BUZZARD'S BAY, Mass., June 23.—At 4:30 this morning Mr. Cleveland through Governor Russell sent from Gray Gables the following statement to the press:

"I should certainly be chargeable with dense insensibility if I were not profoundly touched by this new proof of the confidence and trust of the great party to which I belong, and whose mandates claim my loyal obedience.

"I am confident that our fellow countrymen are ready to receive with approval the principles of true Democracy, and I cannot rid myself of the belief that to win success is only necessary to persistently and honestly advocate these principles.

"Differences of opinion and judgment in Democratic conventions are by no means unwholesome indications, but it is hardly conceivable in view of the importance of our success to the country and the party that there should be any where among Democrats any lack of harmonious and active effort to win in the campaign which opens before us. I have therefore no concern on that subject.

"It will certainly be my constant endeavor to deserve the support of every Democrat."

Mr. Cleveland was terribly tired when the news of the total ballot reached him. Joseph H. Jefferson reported at 4:30 o'clock from Gray Gables, Mrs. Cleveland went to bed at 4 o'clock and when the nominee of the Democratic party sought his chamber it was nearly 6.

The wires were again at work early this morning pouring in congratulations to Mr. Cleveland. Thirty-eight such messages had been received and transmitted from the Buzzard's Bay office to Gray Gables before the telegraphic operator there had arisen, and from that time onward they came in a steady stream. They were from people in all positions in official station, as well of civil life and received with much satisfaction. Mr. Cleveland was again seen this morning after breakfast by the Associated Press representative, and asked if he had any message to send out concerning the work of the convention. In reply he said: "I have nothing to say beyond what I have already given out. The convention has not yet finished its labors, and until it has it seems to me that anything from me would be out of place and open to misconstruction. On being asked concerning his movements, to-day, Mr. Cleveland said: "I shall stay at home as I did yesterday, where I can be ready to receive the congratulations of friends which are constantly coming in." This forenoon Gov. Russell and wife, who have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland, were driven to Buzzard's Bay station and took the cars for Boston.

NEWS AT WASHINGTON.

Hill Refuses to Talk—Senator Kenna Thinks it is All Right.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23.—The news of the nomination of Grover Cleveland to be the Democratic candidate for the presidency reached Washington at an hour so early in the morning that few persons except the enthusiasts who do not hesitate to turn the night into day, when politics are at stake, knew anything of it until an extra edition of the Washington Post appeared upon the street. Some expressions of the popular estimate of the result are given below as follows:

Senator Hill was found before 10 o'clock this morning in his sitting room at the Arlington. He had been up until nearly 6 o'clock, but notwithstanding his lack of sleep he appeared to be fresh, calm and collected. He received the reporter cordially, and appeared to be cheerful and relieved from the strain which has been imposed upon him for so many months, although he made no pretence of unnatural buoyancy. In response to questions as to his opinion of the action of the convention, and as to his future course, he said that he had decided to announce to the Associated Press, and to all other seekers for information that he must politely but firmly decline to be interviewed.

SENATOR KENNA'S VIEWS.

Senator Kenna, of West Virginia, [Dem.]: Mr. Cleveland's nomination has seemed to me for an indefinite period to be the logical result of the situation of the Democratic party. It is hardly to be considered independently. It is rather one of a number of important events in the recent history of the party, which, taken together, constitute a sequence. I think that much of the talk of his want of availability will disappear when his nomination shall have demonstrated that other ambitions are not to be gratified on that score. The Tammany Democracy, I believe to be a true Democracy; and I think that it will be found staunchly supporting the ticket. I think that West Virginia will elect its Democratic ticket including the presidential electors.

Senator Allen, of Washington (Rep.), said: "I am inclined to think that Mr. Cleveland will have the support of the strong, well established Democrats in the state of Washington. The Democracy of that state are especially friendly to Cleveland. My judgment is that he will not make a specially strong race."

PRESIDENT REFUSES TO TALK.

It was not until 7:30 o'clock this morning that President Harrison knew for a certainty that ex-President Grover Cleveland had again been chosen as his competitor in the race for the next presidential term. He had anticipated Mr. Cleveland's election, and would have been surprised only in the event of a different result.

The President remained in his library until 10:30 o'clock last night, reading the bulletins of the convention, and then remarked to Private Secretary Halford, who was his sole companion at the time, that it would probably be at least two hours before the balloting began, and as he did not desire to lose any sleep over the matter, he retired.

An effort was made this morning by a representative of the Associated Press to induce the President to say what he thought of the nomination, but he courteously declined to say anything at all on the subject for publication.

Hill Thanks the New York Delegation.

CHICAGO, June 23.—The following telegram was received from Senator David B. Hill this morning:

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23, 1892.

Hon. Edward Murphy, Jr., Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, Ill.

Please express to the New York delegation my heartfelt thanks for their steady devotion to my cause and for the gallant fight they made to preserve the rights and dignity of the regular Democracy of the Empire State.

[Signed] DAVID B. HILL.

Colored Railroad Laborers Get into a Quarrel—Two are Killed.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., June 23.—Near Dunlow, Wayne county, on the Norfolk & Western railroad Tuesday night, a gang of fifty negroes went out on a spree. A quarrel arose and knives and pistols were used with great effect. After the smoke of the battle cleared away two colored men were dead, having been riddled with bullets and three others were so badly injured from bullet wounds that two of them will die. No arrests have been made and the dead bodies were lying unburied where they were shot yesterday afternoon. The dead are: Abe Purdue and William Scott.

Strong Witnesses.

Among the thousands of testimonials of cures by Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure, is that of Nathan Allison, a well known citizen of Glen Rock, Pa., who for years had shortness of breath, sleeplessness, pains in left side, shoulders, smothering spells, etc.; one bottle of Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure and one box of Nerve and Liver Pills, cured him. Peter Jaquet, Salem, N. J., is another witness, who for twenty years suffered with heart disease, was pronounced incurable by physicians, death stared him in the face, could not lie down for fear of smothering to death. Immediately after using the New Cure he felt better and could lie down and sleep all night, and is now a well man. The New Cure is sold, also free book, by Logan Drug Co.
